

Biosphere

Documentary

(13 x 26 min.)

Biosphere reserves are sites recognized under UNESCO's Man and the Biosphere Program which innovate and demonstrate approaches to conservation and sustainable development. More than simple beauties, out of the ordinary, they all have one thing in common, communities living in harmony within the Biosphere. Water, earth and atmosphere which all life depends on. Featuring the Canadian Biosphere's many questions will be asked and answered about what makes a world reserve. For the first time in a series documentary, emphasis on the thousand-year future is being addressed. A world wide issue with world wide repercussions.
